UniPort Joins NgREN Network, As Jonathan Launches Scheme

By Obinna Nwodim

 Barely two months after the University hosted the Port Harcourt Cluster Workshop of the Nigeria Research and Education Network (NgREN), the priced facility has become fully operational with its launch penultimate Thursday, in Abuja, the Federal Capital Territory, by the President, Dr Goodluck Jonathan. Represented by the Supervising Minister for Education, Chief Ezebuowo Nyesom-Wike, President Jonathan reiterated the resolve of his administration to transform the Education sector. He said that the initiative was aimed at boosting research and intellectual cooperation among universities in the country, hoping that participating universities would make the best use of the opportunity afforded by the important project.

The University participated in the NgREN project at the commissioning via live video conferencing at the Conference Room of the Information and Communication Technology Centre (ICTC).

Confirming the functionality of the facility

While speaking to Supervising Minister, Deputy Vice- Chancellor (Academic), Professor Igboe Joe, who is the project Focal Officer for UniPort, commended the President, the Federal Ministry of Education and the National Universities Commission (NUC) for the initiative, appealing that the project be sustained to meet the objective for which it was set up.

Security Council C'ttee visits KELGA Chairman, New DPO

By Otkor Samuel and Nneka Onyeukwu

In continuation of its consultations with relevant stakeholders on security of staff and students in and outside the Campus, the Governing Council Security Committee visited the Chairman, Caretaker Committee of Ikwerre Local Government Area, Hon. Chibuike Ikenwa and the new Divisional Police Officer, Mr. Osanele Gabriel, at Isiokpo, Headquarters of the Council, penultimate Thursday.

Speaking during the visit, Chairman, Council Security Committee, Professor Regina Ogali, who briefed the CTC Chairman on steps taken so far to strengthen security network for staff and students on Campus and in the University's neighbourhood, stressed the need for the Local Government Council to contribute towards securing lives and property of residents in the area, explaining that the University had secured approval of the Rivers State Police Command to establish a Divisional Police Headquarters in Aluu Clan to oversee security matters in the area.

“We deal with young people as students and it is our responsibility to ensure that they go back home safe after their studies. The unfortunate incident in Aluu which four students of the University lost their lives, put us in a very bad light and we are putting in place every necessary measure to forestall recurrence of such ugly incident, and you know that quite a number of our staff and students live in your jurisdiction,” Professor Ogali said, adding that the presence of a Police Division in close proximity to the University, would reduce crime rate in the environment and ensure adequate security for staff, students and the Aluu Clan. She congratulated the Chairman on his new appointment, hoping that it would herald a new institutional relationship between the University and the Council.

Responding, Chairman of the Caretaker Committee, Mr. Ikenwa, who is a Doctoral Candidate in the Faculty of Social Sciences, commended the efforts of the University in ensuring adequate security within the Institution and its neighbourhood. He also apologised to the University on the infamous Aluu 4 incident, stressing that “the crisis was not a good representation of what the Ikwerre people are,” blaming it on faceless elements who live in the area. Mr. Ikenwa promised that the Council would partner the University and Aluu Clan to ensure adequate security of lives and property.

Also speaking, the new Divisional Police Officer, Isiokpo Headquarters, Mr. Gabriel, promised to replicate his effort at his former place of posting to combat crime in the Local Government Area, stating that his mission is “to prevent crime from happening, rather than investigating crime after they must have happened.” The DPO promised to work closely with the University to strengthen security matters in and around the Institution. He added that one of the security measures he took on assumption of office was the deployment of patrol vehicles in the Aluu axis to safeguard lives and property.

The Superintendent of Police presented flyers containing emergency numbers that could be used by the University Community, lamenting that one of his major operational limitations was inadequate patrol vehicles to expand remote areas where crime may be thriving.

Other members of the delegation were: Professors Anthony Ihe, Owunarii Georgewill (Council Members); Dean, Student Affairs Department, Professor Henry Bel-Gam; Director, Council Affairs, Mr. Roland Wabali, Chief Security Officer, LT Col Reginald Isigwe (rtd) and his deputy, Mr. Johnny Ogbununya and two Council staff.

Encomiums Trail End Of Ihunwo’s Sabbatical In Anatomy Dept

By Ethel Timi-Johnson & Nneka Onyeukwu

In recognition of his meritorious services to the University, staff and students of the Department of Human Anatomy, Faculty of Basic Medical Sciences, College of Health Sciences, organized an elaborate send-forth party in honour of Professor Amadi Ihunwo of the University of Witswatersrand, South Africa, who recently concluded a one-year Sabbatical Leave with the Department.

Speaking penultimate Thursday at the event which held at the Histology Laboratory, former Provost of the College, Professor Blessing Didia, described Professor Ihunwo as a good ambassador of the University of Port Harcourt since graduation in 1992. While commending him for his selfless service to the Department during his one-year stay, Professor Didia stressed the need to produce worthy successors for sustainability of the system.

“You job with the Department of Anatomy is not

Spokesperson for Doctoral Candidates under the supervision of Professor Ihunwo, Sunny Okosieimama, thanked him for organizing research training opportunities for them at the University of Ibadan and a world-renowned institution.

In their separate speeches, Dean of the Faculty, Professor Iyopfa Siministayi and Acting Head of Department, Dr. Joy Obiata, who thanked Professor Ihunwo for his enormous contributions to the growth and development of the Department noted that his presence attracted travel grants and a Department of Anatomy building for the Faculty. “Professor Ihunwo was truly on Sabbatical in this University, as he demonstrated integrity, humility and a clear mastery of his specialization,” the Dean said, commending him for adding value to the Department.

UniPort Re-Opens After Long Vacation

Students returned to the Campus on Sunday, 6th July 2014, while academic activities and registration commenced on Monday, 7th July 2014. A statement signed on behalf of the Registrar, Mrs. Matilda Nnodim, by the Director of Council Affairs, Mr Roland Wahali, indicated that the decision to reopen the University for normal academic activities, was taken at the 335th Meeting of the Committee of Provosts and Deans held on Friday, 4th July, 2014, advising all returning students to adhere strictly to the new resumption time-table as directed to achieve a successful academic session. It would be recalled that marginal increase in statutory charges led to protests by students, who were joined by some faceless elements masquerading as stakeholders in the affairs of the University. The demonstrations forced authorities of the University to extend the Long Vacation. After series of meetings with the students, which are still ongoing, Management had stated that the reopening of the University for the 2014/2015 Academic Session was dependent on when the students would come to terms with the new regime of paying only statutory charges through the Bursary Department and non-salutary charges through the various Departments, Faculties and Colleges. Irked by the decision, the students took to the media to discredit the University by feeding the public with falsehood about the percentage of the new suspended charges. While majority of the students were ready to pay the new marginal charge of N5, 000.00, a vocal minority had since painted the story as it suited their perception of events.

SSANU Fetes Retired Members

In a bid to encourage excellence and commitment to work, the University of Port Harcourt Branch of the Senior Staff Association of Nigerian Universities, (SSANU), rewarded three of its members, Dr Paul Akande, Mrs. Aseleye Akande and Mrs. Oluremi Adewemo for their dedication to duty and outstanding service rendered in their various offices. Speaking at the send-forth party held in honour of the retirees at the Senior Staff Club penultimate Wednesday, Branch Chairman, Mr Bikiime Syder, who thanked the outgoing members for rendering service to the University, recalled that Dr Akande came into the University during his National Youth Service Corp days (NYSC) and was later retained due to his hard work and willingness to serve, urged everyone of them to continue with their good work outside the University. In his response, Dr Akande described his days in the University of Port Harcourt as an exciting one, recalling that he worked in an atmosphere of love: “I love the place, people and my job and above all, I gave my best, but of course, the best of human are human affairs. There may have been shortcomings in the discharge of my duty, but truly, I would say it was not an issue of the heart, it had to do with my head, which is my level of understanding, but all together I had a fantastic experience and I would not trade it for anything else”, he said.

Dr Akande expressed gratitude to God, Management of the University, SSANU, as a Union, Director of the Health Services Department, Dr Ken Anwugwe and other colleagues, stating that whatever success he recorded was because he enjoyed the encouragement and cooperation of his colleagues. He appealed to SSANU members to put in their best in the line of duty. In her contribution, Mrs. Oluremi Adewemo, who was a teacher in the University Demonstration Primary School (UDPS), expressed gratitude to Management for affording her an opportunity to serve and also the Union for honouring them. She called on her colleagues to continue to work and impact the lives of children at UDPS. In their separate speeches, Mrs. Margaret Chinna, Josephine Arimie and Mr Johnny Ogbonnaya praised the outgoing staff for keeping up the good work while in service, charging them to always keep in touch as they wished them well in their next stage in life. Highlight of the event was presentation of cheques to the outgoing staff.
It's Projects Harvest On Ajienka's Watch

By Osibine Yewdlin and William Wodi

The day was Monday. The date was 12th July, 2010. The venue was the new Senate Chambers located inside the Senate Building. The weather was pleasant, while elements were fully in agreement with the appointed landmark event for the day. Guest poured into the expansive auditorium gripped by an atmosphere of eager anticipation.

The new helmsman promptly took his stage and enacted an inciting inaugural Address that was nearly as good as Barack Obama's 2007 Presidential Campaign Speech. The forward-looking Vice-Chancellor, Professor Joseph Ajienka, touched on many issues in his address that promised a new up-building in the University. It was obvious that a new man of action had assumed the administrative saddle to change the way UniPort did business.

Welcome to business unusual! One area that attracted so much attention from the new helmsman was his emphasis on restructuring the skyline of the University of Port Harcourt. He regarded his audience with breathtaking architectural designs of modern buildings that would create the desired aesthetic appeal and a conducive atmosphere for quality learning and recreation.

Professor Ajienka had a vision of accelerated infrastructural development to address the critical needs of the University and has remained committed to achieving this vision. Four years into his administration, the University is undoubtedly a huge construction site with projects at various stages of completion. So far, a total of 19 projects are currently ongoing in the University. It is obvious that by the time these critical projects are completed and put to use, the University of Port Harcourt would witness massive infrastructural facelift, which would undoubtedly improve the educational experience.

It is obvious that the infrastructure being put in place would have direct bearing on the capacity of the University to deliver quality service to its clientele.

For instance, the Central Office complex would provide offices for academic staff, thereby addressing the crying need for office accommodation for staff. The Faculty of Law building would provide the needed working and learning environment for the newly established Law programme in the University, while the Central Instruments Laboratory is designed to accommodate the laboratory equipment procured for researches and experiments at a central point that would be easily accessible to relevant Departments. It would enhance effective coordination and efficient use of the equipment.

The Faculty of Basic Medical Sciences would give a big boost to the activities in the Faculty as the need for a befitting building for the Faculty has become increasingly necessary. Indeed, the Phase I of the Faculty of Agriculture building which is nearing completion is also expected to boost the vibrancy of the Faculty. As a matter of fact, the Faculty has been so impressive in its activities, despite its short span of existence. There is no doubt that the classroom block under construction would serve the need for effective learning by students, some of who currently take lectures at unapproved locations in the University.

The new Faculty of Social Sciences complex would also provide accommodation for the rapidly expanding Faculty, while the massive Animal and Environmental Department building would provide befitting accommodation for the Department. There is also the Faculty of Humanities building designated to be named after renowned novelist and playwright, Dr. Elechi Amadi, as well as the Department of Music building. The Patience Jonathan Centre for Gender Studies building is also at an advanced stage of construction, as well as the very impressive Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN) Centre of Excellence building for International Business and Economics. There is also the College of Graduate Studies building and the Power Systems Engineering complex—all at the Permanent Site.

There is also the Sweet Home Children's Home and Children's Amusement Park that would provide leisure for children within the University community.

It is worthy of note that most of these projects are funded by the Tertiary Education Trust Fund, apart from the Faculty of Humanities building, Model Primary School and the classroom blocks. The patronage and determination with which the Professor Joseph Ajienka-led administration is pursuing the actualization of these projects is highly commendable. It has amply demonstrated the University's commitment to the development of the University of Port Harcourt, despite the challenges of land encroachment by the host communities, as a result of the non-payment of compensation to the host communities for the land acquired to set up the University by the Federal Government.

It is expected that in the next 12 months, these projects would have been finally completed and commissioned for use. When this infrastructural miracle happens, the University administration would have made a huge impact in the physical development of the University of Port Harcourt.

NSCHE Inaugurates UniPort Cell

A way of boosting membership and facilitating professionalism, the Nigerian Society of Chemical Engineers (NSCHE) has inaugurated a Cell of the Association in the Department of Chemical Engineering, College of Engineering, University of Port Harcourt.

Performing the inauguration at the Professor Chi Ikoku Seminar Room, Choba Park, penultimate Thursday, Vice-President of the Association, Professor Emenike Wami, noted that the Association provides a platform for academics to interact with partners in the industry. “It is hoped that the inaugurated Cell would create positive impact on both the State and National Chapters, in addition to creating ample awareness on the activities of the Association”, he said. Professor Wami charged the new Cell to generate ideas that would enable the National body to fashion out new ideas that would move the Association and nation forward.

Chairman of the Rivers State Chapter of the Association, Dr Anthony Ujile, who lauded the contributions of the Department of Chemical Engineering to the growth of the Chapter, commended the University Management and the College of Engineering for the opportunity to inaugurate the Cell in the Institution.

He observed that the new Cell would encourage regular meetings between staff and students to advance the profession. Pledging total support to the growth of the new Cell, Provost of the College of Engineering, Professor Dulu Appah, noted that the Department which has metamorphosed into the Department of Chemical and Nuclear Engineering, discloses that the Centre for Nuclear Engineering has commenced postgraduate and doctoral programmes in Nuclear Engineering.

The Provost pointed out that the new Cell would also facilitate staff development in the Department. In their separate speeches, Representative of the Vice Chancellor, Professor Tony Arinze, Head of Department, Professor Franklin Chukwu, and Director of the Centre for Energy and Nuclear Studies, Professor Ayoade Kuye, noted that the newly-inaugurated Cell would ensure active participation of both staff and students in the activities of the Association at all levels.
